Bull trout location by dates tracked are recorded in this table to the nearest .1 river mile (RM). Locations were determined from GPS data (longitude and latitude), descriptions of landmarks (sometimes highway mile post [MP]) markers), Terrain Navigator map software (USGS maps), and the River Mile Index, Yakima River (1964), Hydrology Subcommittee Columbia Basin Inter-agency Committee. GPS readings from the air, and from the ground were sometimes not precise, but the combination of information described above resulted in determining relative locations. River channel changes through the years and a delay by USGS in mapping those changes result in imprecise RM data. Site descriptions are general in nature, and may appear to be a few tenths of a mile from the RM. Even with the RM imprecision, RM based on longitude and latitude is the most precise location described in the table. Although sometimes not evident when recording data to the nearest .1 mile, radio tagged fish that remained in the same general area for several weeks or months moved up and down short distances, as opposed to staying in a single pool or riffle. River miles are not recorded on USGS maps for the Ahtanum system, so those estimates are more problematic. Also, landmarks were often not recorded or are somewhat vague for the Ahtanum and forks of the Ahtanum. Finally, GPS derived lat/longs often reflect the location of the best parking area and may not accurately indicate that a fish moved a short distance. That is why GPS data is not in this table.
